

Intel Retirees enjoy a great meal and lots of friendship at the 2011 Oregon Annual Retiree Dinner.

On October 25, 2011, Seventy Oregon retirees met at Pumpkin Ridge Golf Club for a fabulous buffet, an update on Intel from Vice President Keith Larson, and lots of laughs.

The event coordinators were Judy Goodman, an Intel Retiree Board Member, and Elyce Wair. Nine door prizes that were provided by Intel Corporation and Pumpkin Ridge Golf Club were awarded to the lucky ticket holders and everyone savored the chocolate covered strawberry shortcake prepared especially for our group.

The attendees were well prepared for a good time. See how many of these retirees you recognize

Although Intel is a relatively young company, the number of retirees increases annually so we took a poll of retirees and we found one person who retired in 1994, another in 2001; then there were those who retired as late and last month. All seem very satisfied with their decision to retire and most enjoy travel and finding new activities and hobbies.

We talked with retirees who love cruises, enjoy hiking, donate time at the Evergreen Aviation Museum, participate in book clubs, make pottery, RV 6 months a year, and one retiree had just returned from an International Balloon Festival in New Mexico. The event is highly recommended.

Intel Vice President Keith Larson presented a brief update on his work with Intel Capital and a broad brush overview of Intel direction. The floor was opened up for questions and Intel retirees obviously keep up with the news. Keith was a “man under fire” as retirees asked relative and poignant questions about China, the economy, competition, profits, the ongoing Ronder Acres construction, positioning, and competitors. Keith had a few questions of his own for retirees which increased intrigue and prompted smiles and clapping. Keith did a great job and retirees made a point of thanking him personally for his time.

Each attendee is given a ticket upon signing in and then directed to our Door

Prize table to review the options. Attendees select the gift they would most like to win and put their ticket in that envelope.

Winners were randomly selected and whoop and laughter ensued as selections were made. Gifts ranged from spa treatments, wine, gift certificates to restaurants, a round of golf for four, and a wireless weather center (a favorite among the men).

Here are some of our winners:

All in all, another fun event that brought together old friends and provided an opportunity to network and meet new ones.

We would like to thank Intel Corporation and our Intel liaison Kevin Fraczek for contributing door prizes and funding to offset the dinner expense. We would also like to thank Keith Larson for taking time from his busy schedule to join us.

We look forward to another fun filled event next year.
