

Oregon/Washington 2014 Intel Retiree Dinner

November 4th was a fun night for the one hundred and ten Oregon/Washington Intel Retirees who attended our “annual” retiree dinner. This fun loving group renewed friendships with previous co-workers, reminisced about projects and deadlines, debated about new Intel direction, and laughed a lot. As our numbers grow, we have members who retired as early as 1998 and others who retired as recently as 2 months ago. The dinner was a special reunion as several members of the Original IRO Board of Directors attended the event.

After a nice buffet, the group was entertained and engaged in a “Battle of Intel Memorabilia”. Judy Goodman challenged the group with Intel questions that ranged from “who did what and when to what microprocessor was launched in 1986. Many of us remembered the right answer but in the wrong year, others were spot on, and others just sat there with a questioning look on their faces. We all laughed and participated as best we could. Our Intel speaker, Tom Garrison, VP in the PC Client Group and GM of the Business Client Platforms Division, was met with many retiree questions and seemed to enjoy the banter and the breadth of interest from the retirees.

It is always fun to find out what our retirees are doing today. We have entrepreneurs, educators, volunteers, travelers, philanthropists, crafters, as well as those involved in elder care, and everyone has a story to share. It is energizing and encouraging knowing that Intel retirees continue to use their knowledge and skills to help others and our community.

A special thanks goes to Judy Goodman for organizing the event and to Steven Young for acting as official photographer. We hope you enjoy the following pictures and can identify lots of attendees. We hope more retirees will join us next year for this fun event.
